The Tribune's Washington special says:

The President was called upon last night by a Constitutional Union special from New York.

In the course of the conversation the President said that the test oath was a very bad thing, and that he had never participated in the rebellion were good men and that the test oath ought not to be applied to them. He added that a new oath was being prepared, and that it would be more lenient than the present one.

In consequence of the turbulent doings manifested by some portions of the people in Washington, it has been deemed advisable to place a large force of police on duty in the city.

General Grant's staff, which has been in the city for some time, has been ordered to leave for the West.
